

Finger Splints

Finger Splints Stack Type

Indications: Mallet finger, fingertip and nail bed injuries

Skintone and Clear Thermoplastic: Used to fix the distal finger joint in the extension position. The hood over the phalanx media should preferably be fixed using the Velcro® strap. The proximal interphalangeal joint remains unobstructed. The side walls of the splint are perforated for ventilation.

Finger Splints Split Splints

Indications: Mallet finger, finger tip and nail bed injuries

Adjustable: The adjustable, modified finger splints are split right along the dorsal proximal section. Consequently, when the fixing strap is put into position, the splint fits this area of the finger exactly. As the swelling of the finger subsides, the splint may be adjusted easily.

"STACTILE" Finger Splints Stack Type

Stactile, Skintone and Clear Thermoplastic: In view of the anatomy, the STACTIP® Finger Splints have a distal, volar window over the tactile elevation. Thanks to this window, it is possible for the patient to touch and to carry out certain sensitive tasks with "finger tip sensation".
